“ Marcilee was my babysitter growing up, and I recall spending a lot of time at Marcilee's white house on the corner of North Jefferson and West 1st St as a kid. I remember her always working hard wearing her smock with handy pockets making and prepping meals, doing housework, working in her large garden, and taking care of her husband Ray until he passed. I was a talker as a kid, and I remember her sitting quietly while she peeled parsnips, apples, or whatever other food with amazing peri knife precision while listening to me rattle on. Some of the most fun times were spent going to the park, walking to the foot bridge and running wild in her yard. Please accept my deepest condolences for your loss. Jill (Hanold) Carter
