As long as stars are above you.

Keith was buried on Friday afternoon, June 1. The weather was beautiful. It was 85°, sunny, breezy. A day Keith would have loved. He would have turned to me, smiled and said, "it's finally Summer". I played a little Marilyn Manson, "Sweet Dreams" for him and after Mike and I each spoke, the 5 of us held hands around him and I played "Let it Be", The Beatles. But this is the special song I played that will always be my song for him. Then we stayed until he was covered and everyone was gone. It is a nice spot for him. Quiet, peaceful. Lots of birds singing. He always liked that. As long as stars are above you. 💜

“ I can't believe it has been over a week since Keith was sitting on the loveseat waiting for the basketball game to start. Surely he might still be coming down the stairs any time now.

*I am so glad we could get the last 3 spaces for us at a small cemetery so close to us we can pass by whenever we go somewhere. Under and behind the pretty bush with the white flowers in the picture. Keith in the middle and us on both sides, like we always were. But I never expected we would need them now.
Never.*

“ My sweet Keith. The kindest, gentlest soul I ever knew. Only you and I know how much you suffered. Every. Single. Day. But you did the best you could. Never complained. And wanted so little. Your simple pleasures were video games and music and racing cars on the elaborate tracks only you could put together. And of course your constant companion Tiger, who is also grieving now. And your favorite foods. And the sound of water running or using a hot tub. And getting your feet rubbed. And going for rides in the car, on the routes we took every day. And only you and I understood what we meant when you said up and over and around or go by the farm or by the golf course. "We're going for the whole ride. Let's GO." And your smokes. You never complained for all the places you weren't allowed or had to go way out of your way to have a smoke. Standing in the rain or the cold. I would give anything to hear you walking up the steps to get a pack out of the closet right now.

Schizophrenia shouldn't happen to anyone. And I am so sorry it happened to you. You never hurt anyone or said anything bad about anyone. But we never had a day without something happening to you. Some days were better than others. Some hours were better than others. But there were no free days. I am so sorry. The demons are finally gone now. But I want you here. I know you were excited for the nice weather. Looking forward to summer. I don't want to be here without you.

And the day this happened was such a good day. It was 80° and you were happy. Got your favorite usual meal from the China Inn. Went on your favorite ride out by the golf course, but the short way. Asked for a haircut and nails done. Shaved, took a bath, changed your clothes. Turned on the basketball game. I close my eyes and you are right there on the love-seat with Tiger.

Maybe you're just on the way home with Dad and you'll be right back. My sweet Keith.

Love, Mom

Thank you to everyone who was kind to Keith over the years. Your older siblings who always tried to include you and learned to understand you, thanks for all the good times. All the people at the restaurants we would frequent who were patient and understanding with him, thank you. And the nurses at the Kramer Center who were gentle and kind to him, thank you for your care. And Dr. Ken Herrmann of Madison who took care of Keith for 20 some years and literally saved our family and helped us tremendously. We can never thank you enough.

Dear Mike, Linda, Eric, Sarah, and Brian,

Sorry I have not written sooner.

Because I feel your pain and I know what you all are going thru.. No words can make you feel better. But as the days go on you will go on, but never will forget, your child or brother.

A friend of mine sent me this:

"Those we love do not go away they walk beside us every day unseen, unheard but always near, and still loved."

Again I am so sorry for your loss.

Love,

My Brother, Linda, Eric, Sarah, Brian
